Funding Part-time Study

The flexibility of part-time study allows you to find a course that fits around your lifestyle, work and other commitments.

The University of Lincoln offers a range of degree courses that can be studied on a part-time basis. If you are a part-time student from the UK/EU you will not be required to pay your tuition fees upfront.

If you are working towards your first degree or another higher education undergraduate course that is equivalent to at least 30 credits, and you fulfil the residency criteria, you may be eligible for a tuition fee loan and a maintenance loan.

New Part-time Students

As a new part-time student at the University of Lincoln, you may be eligible to receive a tuition fee loan of up to £6,935 to cover the cost of your tuition fees. You may also be eligible to receive a maintenance loan to contribute towards your living costs. How much maintenance loan you will receive depends on your household income, course intensity and where you live whilst studying.*

If you are eligible for the loan, your tuition fees will be paid directly to the University and the maintenance loan will be paid into your nominated bank account. You will not begin repaying the loan until you are earning more than £25,000.

You won’t normally be eligible for a loan if you already hold a qualification equal to or higher than the one you are studying for. However, if you plan on commencing a part-time honours degree-level course (minimum 25% intensity) in certain engineering or computer science courses, you may be eligible.
